

Technology Skills Self-Assessment

Intel® Teach Elements: Moving into Mobile Learning

Use this self-assessment to determine your readiness to use mobile learning technologies. How would you rate the abilities of you and your students in each of the following skills?

Teacher Skills

	Basic	Proficient	Expert
Create and update simple Web sites, wikis, and blogs
Manage basic collaboration and communication tools, such as discussion forums and videoconferences
Troubleshoot basic technology issues
Create online presentations, such as videos and podcasts
Manage online quizzes and exams
Use basic features of an online learning management system (LMS), such as Blackboard* or Moodle*
Use a wide range of tools for online presentations, such as screencasting or whiteboarding
Use an online course platform

Student Skills

	Basic	Proficient	Expert
Participate in online communication, such as discussion forums, e-mail, and videoconferences
Conduct Web searches
Access and use online content, such as simulations and videos
Follow safe and ethical online practices
Troubleshoot basic technology issues
Create basic Web sites
Upload media
Participate on social media and collaborative sites, including blogs and wikis
Use simple online collaborative, communication, and creative tools, such as narrated slideshows, social media, podcasting, and photo editing
Use advanced creative visual and audio production technology, such as animation
Design games for learning
Create advanced modifications on Web sites			